Bernstein Litowitz Berger & Grossmann associate Mae Oberste has been recently appointed to the Delaware State Bar Association's (DSBA) executive committee and is to serve as the assistant secretary.

The executive committee of the DSBA serves as the board of directors for the bar association and oversees the finances and operations of the nonprofit organization, voting on measures to improve the association and developing measures required for furthering the mission of DSBA.

Oberste is a member of Bernstein Litowitz's corporate governance and shareholder rights group, and she practices from the firm's Wilmington office. She is also a member of the Richard S. Rodney American Inn of Court.

Prior to joining the firm, Oberste was an associate at Block & Leviton and Young Conaway Stargatt & Taylor where she litigated cases involving corporate law, including breach of fiduciary duty claims and expedited litigation in the Delaware Court of Chancery.

She also served as primary editor for Practising Law Institute's Directors' and Officers' Liability: Current Law, Recent Developments, Emerging Issues (Third Edition).

Oberste earned her J.D. from Seattle University School of Law. After law school, she served as a judicial clerk to Judge Tamika R. Montgomery-Reeves of the Delaware Court of Chancery.
